In 2002 the Economist named Liberia, “the worst place in the world”. Not Iraq, not Afghanistan nor elsewhere—but warlord President Charles Taylor’s Liberia. In Liberia alone, about 250,000 had already died in its 13 year civil war. Further, Liberia was the epicenter of violence in West Africa, exporting terrifying slaughter to Sierra Leone, Guinea, and Cote d’Ivoire. Whole countries, including Liberia, were decimated. And then, things deteriorated.

By 2003 two separate, ethnically distinct rebel armies were marching on Liberia’s capital of Monrovia. Their goals: kill Charles Taylor, sack the city, exact wholesale revenge and seize power. Hundreds of thousands of displaced had fled the fighting and were jammed into Monrovia; with around one and one-half million people surrounded and at risk of being massacred. By June all embassies excepting that of the United States had closed, most all foreigners had long departed, but Taylor clung to power despite repeated demands from African heads of states, President Bush and many others to step down and leave Liberia.

Meanwhile, the United States had just invaded Iraq and was at war in Afghanistan. The Pentagon, especially Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld, was adamant U.S. Embassy Monrovia close down immediately and evacuate all personnel. Most in State Department concurred that it was hopeless. The rebels commenced bombarded of the entire city, and the embassy was hit repeated by both heavy mortar fire and thousands of stray rounds from nearby battles, with some directed fire as well. Embassy defenses were puny.

How was this conflict ended successfully, despite everything? How did a critical ceasefire and dreadful post-conflict situation get converted into a lasting peace of 22 years? What takeaways should be kept in mind when trying to end other complex conflict situations elsewhere?

Join Ambassador John Blaney at a fireside chat to discuss this remarkable 21st century victory, look for broader insights on conflict resolution, and how better to convert ceasefires into lasting peace.

Ambassador Blaney is best known for leading U.S. actions that were decisive in ending Liberia’s long civil war in 2003. With Washington divided on what to do, Blaney risked crossing no man’s land just as the rebel army LURD was about to storm Liberia’s capital city, successfully negotiating on the battlefield a crucial ceasefire, permissive deployment of peacekeepers and a withdrawal of the rebels. This rejuvenated formal peace negotiations in Ghana, and the Comprehensive Peace Agreement was completed a few weeks later. Secretary Colin Powell awarded him The Secretary’s Distinguished Service Award for his actions. Blaney was also a principal architect and implementer of Liberia’s successful post-war strategy to ensure a lasting peace.

Previous diplomatic assignments include: Chief of Mission in South Africa, (where Blaney worked with Nelson Mandela on issues like conflict resolution, South Africa’s response to terrorism following 9/11, and HIV/AIDS); Director for Southern African Affairs at the State Department; presidential designation as U.S. Deputy Representative at the ECOSOC and head of sanctions at the United Nations; Minister-Counselor at U.S. Embassy Moscow (as the Soviet Union was disintegrating); positions working on several nuclear arms control negotiations with the Soviet Union (including principal drafter and a negotiator of the U.S.-USSR Nuclear Risk Reduction Centers Agreement); Legislative Assistant to the Chairman of the House Armed Service Committee (and in the Senate), and as an economist at State Department and the U.S. Treasury. He has received numerous presidential, State Department and other agency awards as well as foreign decorations, including Liberia's Order of Redemption Knight Great Band.

Blaney is the author/editor of Successor States to the USSR (CQ Books, 1995) and several journal articles including "The Art of Strategy Creation for Complex Situations" (NDU's PRISM 5-3, and elsewhere). Blaney began his career as a U.S. Army officer in 1971. He holds an MSFS Degree from Georgetown University.

After retiring from government, Blaney was a country risk briefer on Wall Street and was Co-Chairman of Deloitte's Luminary Board. Currently, he is the CEO of Bridge of Gold Entertainment, LLC. He is married to Robin-Suppe Blaney.

Join us for our next Salon which will focus mainly on U.S. economic diplomacy and policy. To begin with more broadly, however: What is this or any diplomacy for? And what is the role of statecraft (read: the State Department) in the conduct of diplomacy?

Transactional negotiation is the name often given the Trump regime's unprecedented way of carrying out tariff and trade negotiations. These are seen as deal-making, a form of trading calculable gains and losses. Is this model, as such, applicable to trade relations among states? Does it cover all pertinent aspects of trade relations among states, alliances, and multilateral groupings? Is the actual practice of Trump's tariff negotiations successful by its own standards and other relevant measures?

Can transactional diplomacy, deal-making, be applied across the range of US relations with foreign states and alliances? Does it advance broad US interests and foundational values? shared goals of peace, prosperity, and freedom? How does transaction diplomacy align with US strategic objectives?

The exclusive application of transactional diplomacy to peacemaking raises serious and complex questions. According the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, the 30th anniversary of the Dayton Accords that ended the Bosnian War shows that ending wars requires an adept mix of coercion, willingness to engage adversaries ... and managed expectations."

The Salon offers all participants a chance for "thinking aloud together." We ask that members and their guests to this dinner discussion identify trade and other agreements they find successful diplomatic accomplishments. Also we ask that they share with the group aspects of foreign relations other than negotiation and deal-making (e.g., soft diplomacy, humanitarian aid, and public diplomacy) that advance U.S. values and interests.

Our special presenter for this Salon Dinner Discussion is Barbara Bowie-Whitman. Dr. Barbara Bowie-Whitman is an economist and a retired Foreign Service Officer. She was educated at the College of William and Mary and Southern Methodist University and earned her doctorate in economics from the George Washington University.

Dr Bowie-Whitman was a Fulbright Scholar to Guatemala following the completion of her first master's degree. She served in US Embassies in Mexico, Bogota and London, and was Economic Counselor to the US Mission to the Organization of American States. Her last position in government was as Trade Policy Coordinator for the Western Hemisphere in the US Department of State, where she served as the senior State Department negotiator on free trade agreements with 9 countries.

Barbara has been active in politics and community service and leadership for over six decades, beginning as an eleven year old who wrote a campaign song for Dwight Eisenhower. She was Miss National Young Republican in 1971. She is the widow of Lt. Col. John Whitman, an Army Airborne Ranger and military historian.

Barbara resides in Alexandria, Virginia, and represented Virginia as a delegate to the 2020 Republican National Convention in Charlotte, North Carolina.

First Comes Strategy, Then Diplomacy: Reading the New National Security Strategy

DACOR Bacon House

1801 F Street, NW

Washington, DC 20006

06:30 PM - 09:00 PM EST

DACOR Programs, 202-682-0500 x120

programs@dacorbacon.org

A year into the second Trump administration, we have an overall playbook for U.S. foreign policy and diplomacy. In substance and form, it is unlike many such strategies in the past. As a strategy, we should expect it to state U.S. objectives and give a road map for reaching those objectives. But we should not expect policy substance to match earlier strategies. On substance, we may expect debate.

The generic questions informing this Salon's reading of the Strategy include:

Does the Strategy clearly state its goals?

What are the challenges and opportunities that affect success in achieving its goals?

And, how will policies and diplomacy work to secure a desired end state?

The underlying logic of the Strategy will set the stage for assessing the truth claims and value judgements written into the document. How does the Strategy define and refine America First? What place do we take in the world? Who counts as allies and who are our adversaries? How do borders and national sovereignty determine inter-state behavior? What weight does the Strategy give to International Law? When do we go to war and how do we make peace? In the risk/cost/benefit calculation that seems to govern decision making, what are the risks in switching from the post-Cold war paradigm that previous Strategies have followed to something largely new and untested?

The agenda for this Salon is ambitious, but the course of discussion itself will sort out the topics of highest priority to participants in the Salon. In this way, it should identify policy priorities among participants and, possibly, "course corrections" in approaches laid out in the Strategy.

Our guest presenter to the Salon is no stranger to its discussions. Colonel (Ret) John Agoglia led discussion at the Salon of October 28 on "Military Power and the Way of War in Our Time." He's back for more, and brief bio notes follow:

Colonel (Ret) John Agoglia's 30 years of experience comprise operations management, war gaming, strategic planning, and multinational negotiations aimed at developing and implementing strategic policies to influence bilateral, multilateral and intra-governmental civilian-military processes and relationships in the Asian-Pacific, Middle Eastern and European regions.

Colonel Agoglia 30 years as a career officer in the U.S. Army extends to critical work in Iraq and Afghanistan. In Iraq, he was involved in developing CENTCOM plans for the invasion of Afghanistan and the Global War on Terror. In May of 2003, Colonel Agoglia served as CENTCOM liaison officer to the U.S. Civil Ambassador in Iraq, Paul Bremer. Earlier he was Director of the Counterinsurgency (COIN) Training Center-Afghanistan, during a 29-month deployment from 2008-2010.

Colonel Agoglia has recently worked with and lead a four-person team at the National Defense University, Ft. McNair, Washington D.C., designing and facilitating table top exercises for the Office of The Under Secretary of Defense for Policy (OSD-P) that focus on emerging complex national security strategic-policy issues. He is a 1980 graduate of the United States Military Academy and holds a master's degree in Strategic Planning from the School of Advanced Military Studies (SAMS).
